Make the Most of Your Flight Time!

Power Ports — When you need to work or just enjoy being connected, American offers power ports in almost every seat in the First and Business Class cabins, and in select rows throughout Coach. The outlets provide 15V direct current to operate laptops, CD players, and other devices. Outlets are located on your seat console, or mounted to the frame below your seat cushion. Look for the “lightning bolt” symbol on the overhead bin above rows containing power port equipped seats. For seat maps indicating power port locations, visit the Our Planes section on www.aa.com.

Inflight Satellite Phones — Need to make a call? Worldwide satellite communications are available via satellite phones on American Airlines' Boeing 777 and 767-300 aircraft almost anytime worldwide. All remaining 767 aircraft will be equipped with satellite communications by June 1, 2003.

Entertainment — Take some time and relax with American's inflight entertainment. Depending on the length of your trip, you may enjoy films, CBS Eye on American, or both! In First Class on select international flights, enjoy Personal Video or Personal DVD players with 20 movie selections. Depending on aircraft type, you may receive personal DVD Players in Business Class as well. The Boeing 777 has 10 channels of video entertainment in all cabins.

And American exclusively offers the Bose® Acoustic Noise-Cancelling® Headset for your added peace and enjoyment. Unlike ordinary headsets that simply block noise, Bose headsets use patented acoustic technology to electronically cancel noise before it reaches your ear. Simply slip on the amazingly lightweight headset, turn on the power, and be transported to complete quiet or exemplary sound for your inflight entertainment. Available in First and Business class on select international flights, as well as in First class on select domestic flights, the Bose Acoustic Noise-Cancelling Headset is part of our complimentary inflight entertainment package.

For more information about inflight amenities, visit www.aa.com.
